TWO HURT SERIOUSLY IN MOTOR ACCIDENT

Werner Holzhauser was dangerourly injured and Lou Riggs very seriously so in an automobile accident early last Sunday morning on the Boonville road, when Holzhauser's car, driven by himself, left the grade a short distance this side of the cut above the Nick Cocking ranch, and plunged down the mountain side several hundred feet.

Holzhauser suffered the fracture of one of his vertebrae and was taken to San Francisco for expert medical attention. Reports are to the effect that an operation will not be necessary. He has been placed in a sling and it will be some time before he will be able to be out. He is progressing as well as could be expected. Riggs suffered the fracture of several ribs and internal injuries more or less serious.

The other two men escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

The party was en route to the Boonville section for a day's outing.

Dehydrating Plant for Potter Valley

Profiting by the lesson taught during the past two or three seasons, I. J. Thornton and Finis Vann, of Potter Valley, announce that they are not going to take chances on the weather for the drying of future fruit crops, but will proceed as soon as possible with the construction of a dehydrating plant in Potter Valley. They will have the plant in operation to take care of next year's crop. There are rumors that other growers both in Ukiah and Potter Valleys, will follow suit.

Many communities in the State where the weather conditions are far more favorable to drying than they are here, and where the fruit crop is much smaller as well, have erected dehydrators and no longer depend on the weather for the curing of their product.

Messrs. Thornton and Vann have remodled the old hotel at Potter into a temporary dryer for their crop this year.

Cloverdale Unit Is Now Complete

The last cement in the completed Cloverdale-Healdsburg unit of State highway was poured Thursday, finishing the link in the Redwood highway for which the residents of Northern Sonoma county have been alternately praying, voting and fighting for the last several years.

The highway will be opened for traffic after the required hardening period of 30 days has passed. It will give concrete road from Sausalito to Cloverdale, and will be of inestimable value to this part of the north of bay section.

Cloverdale is planning a big celebration to mark the completion of the road, in which the people and business men of Healdsburg will participate.—Healdsburg Tribune.

DEATH OF MRS. HOWARD

On September 27, Mrs. Elmer T. Howard, passed away at the home of her niece, Mrs. Howland, at 2714 Dover Street, Oakland. The funeral was held September 30 at 3 p.m., when her remains were laid to rest in the Oakland Evergreen Cemetery.

Mrs. Howard had suffered intense pain for several months and death came as a relief to her suffering.

She leaves to mourn her passing her husband, and two sisters, one of whom is Mrs. Taylor Day, of Eel River, two brothers and a host of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Howard was of a happy and affectionate disposition, always looked on the bright side of life and was ever ready to help the sick and needy.

She will be sadly missed by all who knew her.

Miss Lucille Swithenbank, a teacher from Humboldt county attending the institute here, was a house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Michelson during the week.

Comptche Woman Bags Big Lynx

COMPTCHE, Oct. 6—Talk about your bear hunters and varmint dog, Comptche has a modern Diana who won't take a back seat for any of 'em. Mrs. E. P. Rasmussen has a fine flock of some forty turkeys. Of late varmints have been preying on them. Last Monday forenoon her dog, Shep, started something in the undergrowth just outside the orchard back of the house. The animal treed within a short distance and Mrs. Rasmussen took her shotgun and went out to see what it was. It proved to be a big lynx cat and it had gone up a redwood sucker and was snarling and spitting at the dog who had gotten up on an old redwood stump from which the sucker was growing and was barking for all he was worth. The cat was killed and when weighed tipped the scales at twenty pounds.—Beacon.

LOCAL DELEGATES ATTEND GLUB FEDERATION MEETING

Mrs. Irving M. Brazier and Mrs. W. D. L. Held were the only delegates from Ukiah attending the session of the Mendocino County Federation of Women's Clubs, which was held at Mendocino last Saturday.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Mendocino Study Club.

The meetings were held in the Masonic Hall at Mendocino, which had been beautifully decorated by members of the hostess club, and the session was very successful, despite the unfavorable weathr coendtions. This is the first time the Masonic hall at Mendocino has ever been used for anything but meetings of the Masonic lodge, but its use was donated on this occasion out of compliment to the visitors.

The ladies of the Mendocino organization served lunch to over fifty visitors at noon and afternoon tea to some hundred-odd.

The outstanding feature of a program replete with musical and literary numbers far above average was an address by Dr. J. V. Breitweiser, associate professor of education at the State University, whose subject was "Economy of Time and Mental Energy."

TEACHERS CONVENTION FAVORS SOLDIER BONDS

The North Coast section of the California Teachers' Association, which met in Ukiah this week went on record as favoring the California Veteran Bond Issue Acts, numbers one and three on the ballot at the general election in November.

The acts were presented and discussed by W. A. Chessall of Ukiah. It was pointed out that the acts provide for no bonus, merely a loan, which will be better than a bonus and yet cost the State nothing.

The merit of the two acts is now pretty generally recognized and as they are better understood sentiment in their favor is growing. Neither is of any benefit without the other, so voters should take care to vote yes on both measures, numbers one and three.

LEA WAS BIG WINNER

Congressman Clarence F. Lea gained the Republican nomination for re-election in the first congressional district by a vote of 23,526 votes, to Euvelle Howard's 13,712 and Greene's 4001, according to the official vote made public recently by Frank C. Jordan, secretary of State. Lea's Democratic vote was 11,767.

HEAVY RAINFALL

The rainfall the past week amounted to 1.10 inches, which brings the total for the season to date up to 3.22 inches. The precipitation last year to date was .15.

The maximum temperature the past week was 81 and the minimum 40.

Mrs. Keith Eversole was a visitor in San Francisco the past week.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION COMPLETES BUSINESS

The convention of the North Coast section of the California Teachers' Association completed its business yesterday and most of the teachers departed that afternoon, some en route home and a number to San Francisco to spend the week-end.

The session was uneventful for the most part. However, a little pep was injected into the proceedings when Principal Allbee of the Eureka school attempted Wednesday moring to have the various officers elected by acclamation instead of by ballot. As the by-laws were against him, he finally subsided.

At the session of the Mendocino county teachers at the Baptist Church Wednesday a movement was begun by representatives of the Ukiah Parent-Teacher Association to do away with the system of final examinations in connection with the graduating classes from the grammar schools.

Mrs. W. D. L. Held opened the fireworks with a spirited attack on the system, which she declared wasteful of the taxpayers' money, inasmuch as the five members of the county board of education are accustomed to take several weeks each year at $5 each per day to correct the papers. She declared the system archaic and stated that it had been abandoned by a large number of the counties throughout the State. The nervous strain on pupils and teachers alike involved in the "cramming" for the examinations were further arguments used against the system by Mrs. Held. Mrs. Lee Gibson, Mrs. Tadlock and others backed up her contention.

Deputy Superintendent Blackman, Supt. Good, Principal Seltzer, of Point Arena, P. B. Westerman, of Potter Valley, and others took up the other side of the contention. They took the stand that until something better were offered the examinations ought to be continued.

The question remained unsettled at the end of the discussion, but it was the sense of the convention that committees from various Parent-Teacher Associations throughout the county meet with the Board of Education at its next session to assist in devising some method of graduation that will do away with the objectionable examinations.

Antoni Wins Suit In Superior Court

The suit of Antoni, vs. the California Grape Products Company, for compensation alleged to be due for services rendered the defendant by the plaintiff as a chemist, was tried in the Superior Court Tuesday before Judge Preston and a jury. The jury brought in a verdict of $850 in favor of Antoni.

Attorney Keith Eversole represented Anoni, while the interests of the defendant were taken care of by Thomas, Thomas & McCowen.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Coombs, of Albion, were Ukiah visitors the past week, Mrs. Coombs attending the teachers' institute and Mr. Coombs, who is county sealer of weights and measures, looking after official business.

BUY POAGE PROPERTY

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hughes yesterday closed a deal for the purchase from the Amandt Poage estate of the former home of Mrs. Poage at the corner of Smith and Bush streets.

FARMERS POOL ORDERS TO FIGHT RUST PLAGUE

The members of the various farm centers throughout the county are in a fight to the finish against grain smut, according to word from the office of County Farm Advisor Myszka this week. The centers of Round Valley, Laytonville, Redwood Valley, Willits, Ukiah and Potter Valley are pooling their orders for shipments of copper carbonate dust, which is sure death to outside smut of all kinds which attacks grains. It is stated that while there are two kinds of smut attacking wheat, there are two still different kinds attacking barley and two more attacking oats. The copper carbonate dust kills all six varieties, and costs but a few fents per acre to apply. It is put in with the seed and mixed by churning, being thus very simple to apply.

MORE PEAR FIGURES

Last week's Dispatch-Democrat gave some very interesting figures regarding the growth in pear shipments this year. We are informed that in addition to the figures given last week in regard to the shipments og green fruit, fully 1800 tons more were handled in the dryer operated by the firm of Cunningham and Thomas of this city.

CITY TAX RATE WILL BE SAME AS LAST YEAR

The city trustees met last Monday evening and set the tax rate for the coming year. The rate was placed at $1.30, the same as that of last year. This will make the total tax rate inside Ukiah, with the county, city and various school and bond taxes, $4.65 on each hundred dollars of assessed valuation.

WANTS FARM CENTER

Albion is the latest community to make application for the formation of a farm center. Farm Advisor C. S. Myszka has written to those interested to canvass their community and if they get enough members he will assist in the work of organizing the center.

Justice Court Jury Acquits Mrs. Briggs

Mrs. U. N. Briggs, who was accused by Marvin Luce, of having taken several shots at him recently while he was hunting in the Pine Ridge section, was tried before a jury in Judge Hurley's court last Monday morning. The jury acquitted Mrs. Briggs after being out but a short time.

Luce was unable to swear that the individual who shot at him was Mrs. Briggs or that he saw her have a gun. He stated that he saw someone riding a black horse several hundred yards away who he thought was the defendant, and that shortly afterwards someone began shooting at him. The shots came from a distance of about 400 yards.

M. H. Iversen conducted the defense, while the prosecution was carried on by District Attorney Gibson.

Mrs Mary Byrnes Submits to Operation

Mrs. Mary Byrnes, of Mendocino, mother of Sheriff Ralph Byrnes, was brought to this city from her home the latter part of last week suffering from an attack of appendicitis. An operation was performed by Dr. Rea Friday and the patient is in a favorable condition.

Sheriff Byrnes, Ben Byrnes, Mrs. Earl Leonard and Miss Grace Byrnes are in constant attendance at her bedside.

The host of friends of the family extend their sincere hope for the mother's speedy restoration to complete health.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kehoe in this city Oct. 7.

Coast Pioneer Has 99th Anniversary

ELK, Oct. 6.—A very interesting and enjoyable affair took place at the home of Michael Donohue, the oldest living resident of this section, in celebration of his 99th birthday.

The interest lies in the fact that the principal entertainer was the honored host himself, who, although within one year of a century of life, sang a number of old-time ballads and even danced some good old-fashioned steps to the immense delight of the many relatives and friends present.

A delightful lunch was served and all whose pleasure it was to be in attendance heartly enjoyed the occasion and hope to attend several more birthday parties in honor of this highly esteemed old gentleman. Four generations of the family were present aside from a number of friends. The affair terminated with the photographing of the oldest and youngest of these—Mr. Donohue and his great grandson, John D. Royce jr., about one-year old.

TWENTY-THREE COUNTIES BENEATH US IN TAX RATE

Twenty-three counties out of California's fifty-eight this year have a tax rate lower than that of Mendocino, one, Mariposa, has the same rate, and the remaining thirty-three have higher rates.

Those who are more fortunate than we are Alameda, Alpine, Colusa, Contra Costa, Glenn, Imperial, Inyo, Kern, Lake, Lassen, Los Angeles, Madera, Mono, Monterey, Orange, Plumas, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Siskiyou, Solano, Stanislaus, and Ventura.

WANT EUREKA BUS LINE

T. B. Riley and Walter Maxwell of Healdsburg have applied to the railroad comission for authority to operate automobile passenger stage line between Eureka and San Francisco by way of Sausalito and Willits. In support of the petition applicants state that at present there is no through stage line from Eureka and points north of Willits to San Francisco and that there is a tourist and other demand for such service.

FORT BRAGG TRUSTEES SELECT FIFTH MEMBER

The deadlock on the selection of a trustee to take the place of Ed Banker, who resigned from the board of trustees of the City of Fort Bragg, was broken last Wednesday evening at a special session of the board, when Perry Bishop, a well-known business man of Fort Bragg was selected as being acceptable to both sides.

Arrayed on one side were Dana Gray and Clarence Broback and on the other, Gus West and Henry Little. They could not agree upon a fifth member until Bishop's name was put forward.

It was thought for a time that it would be necessary to call a special election to settle on a successor for Banker.

Only one little formality remains to be gone through to settle the appointment. That is Bishop's acceptance of the honor thrust upon him.

He was out of town when the appointment was made and will learn of his good fortune for the first time upon his return.

MENDOCINO BANKER HERE

Joshua Grindle, prominent banker and capitalist of Mendocino City, accompanied by Mrs. Grindle, has been in Ukiah the past week. They have been in attendance at many of the sessions of the teachers' institute, and report that they have enjoyed them all very much.

Mrs. Lawrence Waugh was attacked by scarletina last week and has been confined to the house since. Her mother, who was nursing her, also became a victim of the malady. Both, with Mr. Waugh, have been quarantined.

UNUSUALLY HEAVY RAINS DAMAGING TO PRUNE CROP

The unusually heavy rains last week and this have done considerable damage to the prune crop, a number of the growers being unable to find drying facilities. All the hop kilns in the valley are full and the same condition is said to obtain in Sonoma county. The plant of Cunningham and Thomas is being worked to capacity. The growers state that the hot weather preceding the rain for several weeks set the prunes tightly on the trees and they are just beginning to fall well. One grower had several thousand boxes on the ground during the rain.

Those growers who have been unable to find drying facilities will suffer serious loss.

The damage to the grapes is not so serious from the rain, but the lack of cars to ship them in is causing deterioration in the quality and a consequent drop in the price.

Wrestling Match Next Monday Night

The wrestling match scheduled between Douglas Parks and Paul Poulos will take place at the Victory Theater next Monday. A great deal of interest has been aroused in connection with the event by reason of the fact that Parks has never lost a match and Poulos has almost as good a record. Parks is the physical director of the Y. M. C. A. of San Francisco.

There will be two preliminary matches.

The evening's sport will be clean and above criticism and ladies are invited to be present. Tickets are selling for $1 general admission and $1.50 for ringside. They are on sale at Morty's, Roy Nelson's and Poulos' confectionery store.

SAILS FOR MANILA

Miss Veta White sails October 18, for Manila, where she is to become the bride of Mr. B. Ford.

Her position in the farm advisor's office is being filled temporarily by Miss Hilda Banker.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lynch Answers Death's Call

Mrs. Elizabeth Lynch passed away very suddenly at her home in this city last Sunday. She had retired to her room for a rest early in the afternoon and shortly afterward was found lying on her bed. Life had flown, and the end evidently had been peaceful. She suffered a severe attack of influenza some time ago, and had not been very strong since, but nevertheless her death was utterly unexpected and was a severe shock to the family.

Funeral services were held at the First Baptist Church Tuesday afternoon, E. R. Couch officiating.

Mrs. Lynch was the widow of the late Tom Lynch, formerly a peace officer of Ukiah, who met death in the performance of his duty several years ago. She was 65 years of age.

There remain to mourn her death two sons, Clarence and Charles, two daughters, Susie and Mrs. Otto Miller, five brothers and four sisters, as follows: Robert Gibson, of Napa; John Gibson, Alameda; George Gibson, Mountain View; Marion Gibson, and William Gibson, of Ukiah; Mrs. Ida Higgins, San Rafael; Mrs. Susie Brown, Alameda; Miss Rose Gibson and Mrs. Ed Layman, of Ukiah.

The heartfelt sympathy of their many friends is with the bereaved relatives in this blow which struck them so suddenly.

JUDGE KERRIGAN HERE

Judge Frank H. Kerrigan, associate justice of the State Supreme Court, and candidate for re-election, was a Ukiah visitor Wednesday and yesterday. He was courteously received by Ukiah people and his candidacy will be given full consideration in this community.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Bly, of Detroit, Mich., parents of A. F. Wagar, accompanied by L. H. Wagar, a brother of L. H., were visiting the latter at his home here the past week.

A Bonanza for Lawyers

The Lawyers Bill—Proposition Number 24

THERE isn't any doubt that the Lawyers Bill would produce a rich new crop of fees for lawyers—which would be an excellent thing for most of the lawyers advocating its adoption in November. BUT—

The Lawyers Bill would make it illegal for any business man, not a lawyer, to practice doing any simple legal service for his customers or advising them on the laws involved in business transactions; that service, now generally rendered the public, it would transform into a crime.

Consequently, business men being muzzled by this law, people would be compelled to consult and pay lawyers for advice and services now rendered at no cost by practically all banks and business houses.

Thus, by raising a Chinese wall of prohibitions, the act would create a monoply for lawyers; it is outright class legislation.

If you do not want a new and needless crime-creating law that would legislate you into a lawyer's office to pay a lawyer's fee—

A gold watch, lost 25 years ago by Lewis T. Gootee while he was working in a hay field on his father's farm in Barr township, near Washington, Ind., was plowed up recently by Walter Norris, a tenant. The watch was lost while helping put up hay when he was fourteen years old.

Republicans in Great Factional War

Richardson Will "Fire" Machine Men

Johnson Must Look to His Laurels

By J. B. Sanford

DILLON BEACH, Tomales, Cal., Oct. 12.—The Republicans are in a pretty mess and if the Democrats are capable of taking advantage of the situation there may be a chance of electing a Democrat or two in November. The Democratic State Central Committee has been organized and the work has been started by getting the various committees to work. Both Woolwine and Pearson are out on the stump and attracting much attention. They are both very much in earnest and believe there is a chance to win; at least they are willing to take that long chance.

Richardson "Double Crossed"

The two Republican factions are clawing at each other's throats and it looks as though the word harmony is not in their vocabulary. The big row started at the organization of the State Central Committee some two weeks ago. The Richardson men claim they were "double crossed" by the machine in the selection of chairman; that they were promised that no one would be selected for that position that was not satisfactory to Richardson, the gubernatorial candidate. In the mean time it is stated on the low down that the machine job holders tried "to make up" with Richardson to that they might be able to hold their jobs. On the contrary, however, it is known that Richardson flatly informed the tax eaters that he intended to "fire" every one of them for the good of the public service. Thereupon the machine "went back" on its word and "put over" a chairman that was antagonistic to Richardson in the primary. Richardson and his followers resented the shabby treatment and breach of faith and "went over the heads" of the machine and took his faithful bunch of primary workers and opened up independent headquarters of his own and is conducting his own campaign. The machine did not expect this and they are very much up in the air—and a number of them are beating the tom toms in the Woolwine camp.

What Richardson Loses

This independent move of Richardson has undoubtedly cost him some votes. To begin with he can expect to lose the 11,000 machine men now on the State pay roll, because they have been told that they must go. Thus knowing in advance that they are to be separated from their soft jobs these tax eaters will go the limit to defeat the Republican nominee for governor. Besides this Richardson loses Hearst's Examiner and the "wet" Sacramento Bee, a great many "wets," the San Francisco Board of Supervisors except Mary Margaret Morgan. Can Richardson make this up from other sources? He thinks he can. And right on top of this Annette Adams, United States Attorney under the Wilson administration, and a great many "drys," have "bolted" Woolwine on account of his "wetness." Some 5,000 women who are organized to pass the Wright Act have dropped into the Richardson camp. So there you are. And it cuts both ways.

Can You Beat This

This "wet" and "dry" question is a dangerous thing politically; it does cut both ways. When one gets to discussing "wet" and "dry," law and reason depart. A prominent Democratic attorney (a "wet") has stated that he was going to take the stump for Richardson and the Wright Act. Asked as to his idea, he said that if the law was clamped down hard and made as onerous and objectionable as possible and a "dry" governor were elected, it might be the means of arousing the people to rebellion and that the Volstead Act might then be amended. Can you beat it? No one can tell what will change a vote this campaign.

Who Are The Progressives?

There is some controversy as to just who are the real progrssieves in this campaign. Hiram Johnson and his machine wrecking crew claim to be the real, simon pure, blown in the bottle progressives. Every one that does not bow to Johnson is a reactionary; every body that is for Johnson is a progressive. That's it. Friend Richardson and his bunch of loyal followers claim title to the name of "progressive" in this campaign and point to Richardson's record as proof.

The Anti-Johnsonites laugh at Hiram's claim of being "progressive" and say that he long since "flew the progressive coop," and is now an old guard machine man in the same bed with such other progressives as M. H. DeYoung, Frank Flint, Frank Doherty, Frank Daroux, and Eddie Graney and other intellectual and dazzlingly brilliant, progressive lights.

They claim that Johnson has always been for Johnson and has never failed to stick a knife into the party nominee unless such nominee looked to Johnson for guidance, and cite the manner in which Johnson slipped the knife into Hughes in 1916, when Johnson carried the State by 300,000 and Hughes lost the State and the presidency to Wilson by a narrow margin. They are suspicious of Hiram and say he wants to get a big majority this general election in order to show the "boys back east" that he is the "big noise" out west. So they are looking for the assassin's knife.

How Johnson Got Title

These anti-Johnsonites say that Hiram got the title of "progressive" in 1910 when he "kicked the S. P. and its machine out of politics." Every body that was a member of that machine or that was on the State pay roll was denominated a "reactionary" and "kicked out," even if laws were changed in order to terminate official tenures as in the case of Alden Anderson and other capable and faithful servants of the people.

The many friends of Friend Richardson, the progressive Republican and anti-machine candidate for governor, now state ironically—"If Hiram got the title of "progressive" for firing some 3000 machine men off the pay roll, how much more of a "progressive" would Friend Richardson be if he should fire 11,000 from that roll?" At any rate Richardson and his crowd are going to stick to "progressive Republican and anti-machine" candidate.

Johnson to Take the Stump

It is stated that Johnson is getting scared at the many inquiries that progressive Republicans are making as to what manner of man candidate Pearson is, who is out making such good common sense talks to farmers. Therefore Hiram will soon take the stump in his own defense. So far Hiram has been able to do anything and anybody and every body. He may be riding to a fall; the Republicans generally are pretty sore. They say he expcets to get the "drys" and is now flirting with the "wets" with the left eye that won't behave. Oh, you flapper.

A "progressive Republican and anti-machine" man and a country delegate were going to the ferry the other afternoon and there was an awful jam. The delegate, seeing the awful mob, said 'What is it, Bryan or a circus." "Neither," said his friend, "Just the State machine turned loose from doing nothing for the day." "Why they interfere with the traffic don't they?" "Not after next January, for this is the bunch that Richardson is going to separate from their jobs when he takes control of affairs," said his friend. And the two were soon lost among the tax eaters.

VICTORY THEATRE

THE NEVIN CONCERT COMPANY.

This splendid company takes as a foundation for its program, representative compositions of the great American composer, Ethelbert Nevin, and presents them in a way that makes everyone appreciate their melody and tunefulness.

Part two offers the works of other composers. All of the selections presented are of a high musical standard, yet popular. A feature of this part of the program is the presentation by the company, in costume, of real Gypsy music by such composers as Dvorak and Brahms. Delightful readings and character sketches are also given.

The musical selections of both parts of the program are introduced by explanations which are at once brief and interesting.

The four members of the company possess in high degree the quality of personality, and this added to their splendid technique makes their program one which never fails to please.

The Nevin Concert Company has been one of the popular Lyceum favorites of the last two seasons.

Miss Irene Taylor is the cellist and manager of the company. She is also a reader of ability.

Miss Olive Pearce, violinist, has had a splendid successful experience in orchestral work.

SIGHT SUDDENLY RETURNS

Girl Sees Again After a Blindness of Days.

As sudden as her sight went it returned the other night for Margaret Wisler, nineteen years of age, of Norristown, Pa. When her niece entered the room Miss Wisler said, "She has on a brown and plaid dress," which was true.

Because she had not seen for ten days her people thought she was delirious and summoned a physician, but he found that sight had been restored.

Miss Wisler went stone blind while she was driving an automobile. She was frightened when an approaching machine nearly struck her car. She pulled to the side of the road and told her companion, John Smith, she couldn't see. He drove her home and she has since been under the care of specialists and doctors. When seen later she said:

"I am happy that I can see again. The past ten days that I could not see was the longest time I ever spent. I never appreciated the blessing of vision until it left my eyes. And the best of it is, the doctor tells me the recovery is permanent."

HOPLAND NEWS OF PAST WEEK

INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

HOPLAND, (Cal.,) Oct. 12.—William Kelsey who resides south of town had the misfortune to be quite painfully injured, when the automobile in which he was riding plunged over the bank into Feliz Creek, last Saturday morning.

The accident was caused by a bolt coming out of the steering knuckle just as the car was approaching the bridge. The driver of the car escaped uninjured. That the two were not seriously injured is considered miraculous.

Mrs. William Duncan returned Friday from several days' visit in San Francisco and Berkley.

J. R. Huston was a business visitor to Santa Rosa Saturday.

MENDOCINO RED FIR EXCELLENT FOR VENEERING

A. E. Johnston of the firm of Gray & Johnston, owners of Russian Gulch, was here Thursday afternoon. The firm has botten out considerable fir and pine for the veneering plant of H. P. Thornton located in Oakland, and not long ago Mr. Johnson visited the same. He states that a fine product is being turned out and that the demand is now greater than can be supplied. Red fir is now used nearly altogether as it is found that it makes a much better product than does the white fir. The use that this veneer stock can be put to is almost unlimited and it should develop into a big business in time and furnish a good market for many small and isolated stands of red fir.

Following the disaster to the Mae Hyman, no logs were shipped from Russian Gulch for some time and a stock accumulated there, but the Stockton City and Point Reyes have cleaned this up and are taking out shipments every trip.—Mendocino Beacon.

FATHER'S DEN

By VIVIAN BURBANK

©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

I wanted the kind with the hunting scenes, and ma picked out the one with the moss roses.

"I have," said ma.

"Yes, grunted father doubtfully, "but you never saw one."

"I'm not over crazy about having a den, anyway."

"Maybe you're not." Pa threw his paper down on the table, disgusted like. "If your Aunt Mary hadn't camped with us for two years, we'd had a den, then, and I'd had one room in the house that I could sit in in peace! Can't smoke in the kitchen, might suffocate the canary. Can't light up in the dining room, or the parlor; mustn't spoil the curtains, or turn the silver! I'll tell you right now, Tillie, that I'm doggone sick and tired of trotting down three flights of stairs every time I want to smoke! Sit there on an old butter tub and—well, I'm sick of it—and I'm going to have a den!"

"There'll be no curtains!"

"No, you bet there won't! Canaries, either!"

"But, George, we won't have any guest chamber."

"Thank the heaven for that," drawled father. "There won't be any place for the company to park, and we'll be so much in!"

"Say pa, can't we have the hunting paper?"

"No, I've picked out the paper with the country scenes, brindle cows and all that. I hunted all over town for a peaceful and restful paper."

"Scenes, did you say?" asked ma, innocently. "Country grave yards?"

"That's it," snapped pa, "take the joy out of it! Seeing that I'm paying the rent on this place, Mrs. Winslow, I guess I can have something to say about the wall paper, can't I?"

"Far be it from me to stop you from having your say. But I must say I don't admire your taste. Aunt Mary just hates cows!"

"No? By jove, that's so, too!"

When the paper came we took it into Aunt Mary's room, or what's going to be the den.

Pa told her he could do lots better if she'd leave the room.

"Lock that door," pa said to me, but there was no key, so he put a wooden horse against the door and made me sit on it.

"Say, pa, someone's tapping on the window." All I could see was a hand, first, then Mr. Jones' head. They live underneath us, and Mr. Jones must have sneaked up the back stairs and onto the piazza, without anybody seeing him.

"Mighty good of you, Jones. Tell the truth, I didn't dare tackle the blooming thing alone!"

Mr. Jones told pa that he was glad to help. They laid the paper on our kitchen table and Mr. Jones cut off one edge, cut them in strips—that is, the paper in strips, and told pa to paste 'em and he'd hang 'em. Gee! it didn't take long before one whole side was almost covered. He stayed on the ladder and pa handed him the strips.

Pa was pasting to beat the flying horses when I heard ma coming down the hall. I told pa, and he hurried to give a long strip to Mr. Jones, and somehow he got tangled up and slipped on the pasty side. He grabbed the ladder, and Mr. Jones said a cuss word, but that didn't stop him, and next minute down came Mr. Jones, ladder, brushes and everything, on top of pa.

"Mercy!" yelled ma, banging the door. "What on earth are you doing?"

"Don't you get off that thing," whispered pa at me, trying to get out from under Mr. Jones and pull the paper off his neck. "You—"

"George, open that door."

I stuck until ma banged a chair against the door and knocked me and the old horse over.

Ma burst into the room. She paid no attention to pa, but pulled the paper off Mr. Jones' face, and when she saw who it was she lit in to him, just as if he was pa.

"What does this mean, Mr. Jones?"

"Mean?" snapped Mr. Jones, red as a beet and hunting for his necktie. "Means like as not I've broken my collar bone!"

He helped ma and me get pa up, but pa sat down again.

"Next time, George, don't ring me in on anything you're afraid to tackle yourself. Another thing: I wouldn't stick this confounded looking stuff on a wall for any man living; not by a jugful. I think too much of my reputation.

Ma was holding pa's head in her lap.

"I'll paper the blame thing or bust!" muttered pa, rubbing his shoulder "I'm going to have a den, and have it the way I want it."

"No, George, you're not!"

"I'm not? Well, why ain't I?" asked poor pa, kind of feeble like.

"'Cause her letter just came, and Aunt Mary's coming back!"

Different Now.

"Aren't you aware that all these socialistic schemes of yours have been tried out at one time or another?"

"I am," replied the man whose whiskers look as if they had been starched.

"And they all failed"

A DOCTOR'S SON

By MARY LOUISE CORMIER

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The old Garrick house sits firmly and impressively on the very summit of Fox Hill. When it was first built, this square, red brick domicile with the quaint colonial portico was the show place of Merrimac Mills. Beneath its hospitable roof Doctor Garrick, then a man of twenty-eight, and a distinguished graduate of a leading medical school, introduced his bride to the townspeople. There, a few years later, was born his only son, Dan Garrick.

The doctor, true father that he was, idolized that boy. In due course, Dan graduated with honors from the medical school—the same school that had given his father a degree. Bursting with pride and plans for the future, the doctor brought out his new roadster and drove to the station to meet his son.

"I'm the proudest man in Merrimac Mills, my boy," he confided, happily, as they headed for the red house on Fox Hill. "Ever since you were a little shaver no bigger than Aunt Chloe's Sam I've dreamed of the day when you could step into my shoes and carry on the good work."

"Dad," Dan explained, "I don't want to become a doctor. It doesn't appeal to me. I think I'll try journalism."

If Dan did not inherit his father's taste for medicine he was heir to something just as characteristic—a stubborn will. In vain did the doctor plead, cajole, rage and threaten. Dan was firm. He applied for a reporter's job on the Merrimac News and got it. But he left the Garrick house, and when he and father met on the street they did not speak.

These meetings pained Dan almost as much as they must have pained his father. He had to struggle with all his force of mind to keep from surrendering to the doctor's wishes, when he saw the lines of sorrow and disappointment in his father's face. They recalled to him the doctor's parting words, uttered as the two of them faced each other in the study on the night of their altercation.

"You were born to be a doctor," he had declared hotly. "Some day heaven is going to call upon you to do your duty. Maybe you'll believe that!"

The words burned themselves into Dan's brain. Often they came between him and his work. He was thinking of them on a certain stormy night in December as he waited for an assignment in the "local" room. Suddenly Carson's thin metallic summons brought him to his feet and sent him scurrying into the editor's office.

"You're a doctor, aren't you, Garrick?" questioned Carson, anxiously.

"I—yes, in a way," admitted Dan, reluctantly. "I've got a degree, but not much parctice to speak of—"

"Your father is out on a case in Hadley. Nick's wife needs a doctor right away. Think you could—"

"I'm very sorry," Dan began firmly, "I can't—"

"You can and will!" snapped Carson. "This is an assignment I'm giving you to help the wife of one of the finest men that ever set a line of type. Now get out and don't come back here until you've 'covered.'"

Dan went. He dragged Lem Parks out of bed and they drove in Lem's rusty little car to Merrimac Bridge.

"Jingo!" ejaculated Lem, as he pulled down the snow-clotted windshield. "The bridge is gone!"

"I've got to get across that river, Lem," Dan muttered, grimly. "Nick's wife is in agony over there and I've got to help her—"

"You'll have to swim, then," retorted Lem, dryly. "A boat couldn't get you across in water like that."

"Strap the kit," repeated Dan. Lem obeyed him without further protest, fastening the little black valise to the doctor's back.

Dan slipped into the icy waters and the battle was on. He made straight for Vicker's Mill, but the force of the current and the blinding snow and sleet carried him a good mile beyond his destination. He crawled up the opposite bank and made his way through the storm. Nick met him at the door and ushered him into a room where his wife lay on a cot, moaning.

A dozen eternities might have passed before Dan placed a tiny, red, squalling atom of life at the unconscious woman's side and went out to find the troubled father.

"Fine boy," he announced, smilingly. "You're in luck, Nick."

"Thank heaven," mumbled Nick. "You're a true son of your dad, Dan."

"You were born to be a doctor," his father's words ran through his brain again. "Some day heaven is going to call upon you—"

"Going to succeed your dad, aren't you?" Nick persisted.

"Yes," said Dan. And he said it with a thrill of pride that sounded strange in his ears. "I guess dad was right, after all—" His voice trailed into a choking gasp. He fainted.

A LEMON PIE

By LOUISE M. ADDELSON

(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The catastrophe took place two years after the wedding, previous to which the little bark of domestic happiness, guided by the tiny god of love, had sailed smoothly and tranquilly over the sea of matrimony with never a glimpse of trouble.

The blow came suddenly. To have struck a real rock would have been misfortune enough, but to have one's life's happiness buried in an oozy, sticky mess of lemon meringue was galling. It lacked dignity.

The skipper, Lionel Strange, knew it. So did his little mate, Grace. They knew, too, after a while, that their predicament was the result of taking on a well-meaning but boat-rocking passenger where passengers have been, are, and always will be, taboo.

The passenger was Uncle Ed. Would it be possible for his dear nephew and niece to put him up for a while?

Captain and mate were agreeable to such a proposition. And though Grace had never met Uncle Ed, she already had cause to be grateful to him, since the house they lived in was his wedding gift, without which their marriage would have been indefinitely delayed. The response was so cordial that Uncle Ed arrived on the first steamer he could get.

He was a jovial old uncle, and they enjoyed him immensely—for a while.

He was finicky in the matter of food, and after a few sessions with Dora in the kitchen, Grace was ready to announce to the world that a rich bachelor uncle was not such a desirable acquisition as one might childishly imagine. Dora's culinary efforts, which had hitherto been more than passable, failed to please.

The climax came when Grace, finding that Uncle Ed was particularly fond of lemon pie, innocently volunteered to make one, thereby bringing on the great disaster. Grace studied lemon pie for a week before, with fear and trembling, she undertook the creation of one.

Lemon pies danced before her sleepless eyes at night, or filled her dreams when her overwrought nerves succumbed to slumber. She spent an entire morning mastering its intricacies. Nevertheless, the result, she felt, justified her efforts. It was a wonderful pie, all golden-brown and snowy white. Exhausted but triumphant, she bore it to the table, cut it, and served it.

Uncle Ed tasted his portion. The taste seemed a spark to his fiery tongue. He made a few pithy remarks on cooks in general and one cook in particular.

"Whoever made that pie," he finished, "should have been sent to jail for it."

Grace rose, her eyes glittering. "You—you—nasty—old—glutton!" she said, distinctly, and left the room.

Lionel followed, after a suitable interval. He found her packing her trunk.

"What's that for, Grace?" he asked, with husbandly authority.

"I'm leaving you, so you can enjoy Uncle Ed's society," she retorted. "It's too choice to divide with anybody."

"Grace, that's ridiculous," said Lionel, sternly. "I'm surprised at you! To make such a fuss over a criticism on your cooking!"

"It's ridiculous to make a fuss over such a disgusting uncle! A perfect pig of an uncle, whose chief worry is what to put in his stomach!"

"He's been awfully good to us. He's given us the house we live in."

"With him inside of it, I'm afraid I can't summon up any feeling of gratitude," she flung back.

"Well, you'll have to apologize to him."

"Lionel Strange," said Grace, her eyes flashing, "don't you talk to me like that! He'll apologize to me, and you, too, or else you'll stay here together, precious pair of relations that you are, and keep house by yourselves. I'll go to some place where the world doesn't center about a lemon pie!"

Slowly but surely the ship began to rattle into its sticky culinary mess. The captain tore his hair. It was very well to assert husbandly authority, but if Grace paid no attention to him—One couldn't see one's life wrecked in this foolish manner. Abstractedly he heard a train whistle in the distance. Grace threw a few more things into her trunk. Lionel caught her hands and drew her to him.

"Grace, darling, I'll see what can be done about Uncle Ed. I'll speak to him today. I'll—"

Grace, with outward reluctance and inward delight, forgave her husband, and the two went downstairs to seek Uncle Ed.

But Uncle Ed was nowhere to be found. Instead, a note was discovered on the library table, which told them that the departing train had carried Uncle Ed along with it, on his way to Africa. He apologized for being ill-tempered and ill-mannered, saying that life in the wilds made one unfit for civilized society. Would they please forgive a grumpy old bachelor who wished them nothing but happiness?

"Poor Uncle Ed!" said Grace. "I'm sorry!"

And the little ship, now clear of trouble, sailed on, with fair weather and a smooth sea.

NATURE'S WORK WELL DONE

Plant Architecture on a Plans That Never Can Be Reached by Handiwork of Man.

The architecture of plants puts man's finest works to shame and makes his best bridges and cathedrals seem poor structures in comparison. Here is a cross section of the stem of a scouring rush. This plant raises a narrow stem to a height of a hundred times its own diameter. It can withstand the weight of the heaviest snows without injury.

As you notice, the stem is made of a succession of arches. Externally hanging arches span between piers of silica. The piers themselves rest on barrel vaults, the green cells between are arched together on the pointed vault principle, and the vascular corridors below are connected by a series of internal hanging arches.

In an adult equisetum there may be more than twenty such arch systems within the circumference of the stem. The vaults do their work well. This is abundantly testified by the plant's ability to live in places where other vegetables can gain no foothold.

QUAKERS AS WHALE HUNTERS

In earlier days, days when American clippers swarmed on the seven seas, whales were the only oil fields. Men went out not to hunt whales for their bones, but they slung the harpoon for the same reason that men sink a shaft in Texas today. The first and greatest of all whalers were Quakers.

"The chief whaling communities—those of Nantucket and Buzzard's Bay — were originally settled by Quakers," Raymond M. Weaver writes in the course of his chapters on whaling, included in his book, "Herman Melville, Mariner and Mystic."

"The inhabitants of these districts in general retained in an uncommon measure throughout the golden age of whaling the peculiarities of the Quaker. Never, perhaps, in the history of the world have there been mated two aspects of life more humorously incompatible than whale hunting and Quakerism. This mating produced, however, a race of the most sanguinary of all sailors, a race of fighting Quakers—in Melville's phrase, 'Quakers with a vengeance.'"

TRY A WANT AD--IT PAYS.

A GIRL FROM PARIS

By LILLIAN DOUGHERTY

©. 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Going away, Mrs. Parsons?"

"Just to Boston for a few days to meet my cousin from Paris. She's going to visit me all summer. As nice a little girl—"

"From Paris?" Nettie Ketchum's eyes opened wide with surprise and dismay. The acknowledged belle of Pineville could hardly be expected to greet news of a visitor from Paris with equanimity.

"Yes. She's lived there all her life. She's nineteen now. We'll be back Wednesday," Mrs. Parsons said, and hurried away to the station.

Before noon the whole village was bubbling over with the news of a visitor from across the water. From Paris of all places!

"She sure will liven up this burg," Paul Tinker remarked. "And I'll say we need it." Paul kept the only garage in town, and owned a roadster. He was considered Nettie Ketchum's undisputed property.

"Of course she'll be at the Masonic dance Thursday night," Millie Carson said. "I just can't wear my lavender silk again."

"I say, Paul, o' man, she'll talk French, you know. We ought to know a few words to sorta give a 'Juda' spirit' to our conversation." Jasper King turned confidently to Paul. The others looked at him with surprised respect.

"There's French books in the library," Millie offered.

Before long the group separated elaborately, going in different directions.

Paul said nothing, but once inside the door he melted into the dark recesses in the back, where he tripped over Jasper tugging dusty volumes from the lower shelf.

Forlornly Nettie wandered home. She could not afford a new dress, and, anyway, she felt doomed to be eclipsed by the brilliant foreigner. She stifled a sob as she saw the interloper dashing about in Paul's car, with Paul making love to her. It was sure to happen so.

In another day Pineville got busy in earnest, preparing a welcome to the stranger. She should not find things too different from her Paris home if they could help it.

The village Emporium decorated one of its windows with two hands clasped, one labeled "Paris," the other "Pineville," each emerging from the folds of its national colors.

The Ladies' Aid made a large French flag and it hung across the street between the Masonic Hall and the postoffice. The village buzzed and scrubbed and polished for five days.

Nettie alone made no preparations. She was sure Paul would become enmeshed in the toils of the French "adventuress," and that there was no use fighting fate. Paul had polished and cleaned his automobile and covered it carefully for the night of the dance. When he neglected to take her for their usual Sunday drive she wrote to her aunt in Connecticut, offering to spend the summer with her.

Mrs. Parsons and her cousin did not arrive until late Tuesday night. A perturbed neighbor knocked at the kitchen door early Wednesday morning and was met by Mrs. Parsons, briskly getting breakfast.

"We were just so busy down to Boston that we missed the early train. And Cally was seasick from the boat, too. She's sleeping late this morning." She would be delighted to go to the dance that night, Mrs. Parsons was sure.

"She's as nice a little girl as ever I see," she added.

Nettie was dressing in her old rose colored voile when Paul called up and said he thought he ought to bring Mrs. Parsons and her cousin to the dance in his machine. She choked back a desire to cry, but she agreed with him and, stubbornly resisting a temptation to stay at home, got ready and went with her brother.

The crowded hall was in a panic of suspense a half hour before the word went around, "They are coming." Then it broke up into giggling, whispering groups. The tableau was arranged, each one of the group standing stiffly holding an armful of roses.

Paul entered first and immediately the band struck up the "Marseillaise." He looked queer, flustered and a trifle ghastly. He gazed wildly around the room, saw Nettie, and rushed across to her with something of the attitude of one fleeing from doom.

"How lovely you look," he said rapturously, squeezing her hand.

"Lovely, beside the girl from Paris?"

"Paris!" Paul fairly snorted. "There she is now. Look at her!"

In the doorway, shrinking behind Mrs. Parsons' ample purple gowned figure, was a girl, timidly twisting her red hands in the skirt of her striped muslin dress. Her mouse-colored hair was pulled up shamelessly, exposing her ears. She blinked unceasingly in the glare of the uncovered electric bulbs.

The tableau stood as if petrified, so Jasper stepped up and said, "Parle voo—"

The girl tittered bashfully. "Ain't he a scream?" she appealed to Mrs. Parsons.

Jasper stepped back a trifle stunned. Nettie looked inquiringly at Paul. He slipped her hand under his arm and led her to a seat on the window ledge.

"She came on the boat from Portland," he exploded. "She's from Paris, yes. Paris, Maine!"

The Courage of Columbus

IT shone forth in his three years' pleading for ships before the Queen of Spain; again in his persistent westward course in the face of mutiny.

Persistence is a form of courage as needful today as in Columbus' time.

In financial matters its first evidence is the ability to build a practical surplus as a safeguard for the future, or as a basis for those larger accomplishments which lead to wealth.

FERNDALE WINS GAME

Outweighed and outclassed, Ukiah High School football team fought gallently last Wednesday against the husky eleven of the Ferndale high, going down to deefat to the score of 32-0. The Ukiah lads did their best, but were unable to get the ball over the Ferndale goal line.

One of the Ferndale boys suffered a broken collar bone in one of the mix-ups.

Declares Power Act Will Benefit People

"The easiest way for the people of California to reduce their taxes is to vote for the Water and Power Amendment," declared L. C. Davidson, campaign manager for the California Water and Power Act, at a mass meeting at Cleland Hall last Monday night.

"Profits from the publicly owned water and power resources have enabled Los Angeles in the last two years to reduce her city tax rate from $1.60 per $100 valuation to $1.26," Davidson continued. "Moreover, the people of Los Angeles have been enjoying light and power rates which are approxiately one-half, and water rates which are only one-third, of those paid elsewhere in California under private monopoly.

"Lodi, out of profits of its water, light and power plants, has bought a city block, made it into a park and built in it a municipal swimming pool and baths at a cost of $20,000. For the last fiscal year $14,000 of profits went into the various funds for expenses, while the total of property taxes was less than $41,000, so that the saving in taxes was more than 25 per cent.

"Alameda has been operating its own lighting system for ten years. With rates approximately 15 per cent less than those charged in adjoining communities, profits from this system have saved the taxpayers thousands of dollars by providing $30,000 for schools, $30,000 for an industrial railway, $27,000 for parks, and $30,000 for municipal health center.

"What municipal ownership has done on a small scale for these California cities, the Water and Power Act will do on a large scale for the entire State."

VARIETY IS THE SPICE OF LIFE

They say that "Variety is the Spice of Life" and when one goes to see "The Girl and the Tramp" which is scheduled for an appearance at the Victory Theater on Wednesday, October 18, a spectator will be surprised at the variety of entertainment crowded into one evening's real enjoyment. The management promises something entirely different in stage plays, the whole performance is crowded with laughter and novelties, and the fun is fast and furious. Vaudeville, comedy, musical comedy and drama all blended together, and no long waits but a fast running show.

CARD OF THANKS

LIVE MAN IN HEARSE

Driver of the Conveyance Heard Strange Cries From Within.

Visions of spooks entered the mind of a hearse driver at Salem, Ore., when he heard the cries of a man apparently echoing from within the closed carrier. At the time of the strange occurrence, the driver was on his way to the country to answer a death call. The driver at first thought he was the victim of a hallucination, but as the cries continued he decided to investigate.

Leaving his seat the driver rushed to the rear of the hearse and opened the door. Out jumped a man, and explanations followed. The man said he had been assigned to make some repairs, and had been given no notice that the hearse was to leave the garage. The rear door was slammed, and the workman was temporarily imprisoned.

The roar of the engine drowned out the man's cries, and the hearse was several miles from the city before he could attract the attention of the driver.
